Minneapous has again been visited by a conflagration more disastrous than that which destroyed the mills of Governor Washburn, three years ago. On Sunday morning the fire broke out in a mill owned by Governor Pillsbury. The mill had been idle for some time and it is not known whether the fire originated from gus, or from the flour dust. There appears to be no way to stop the flames which envelop one of these massive structures. The fire spreads rapidly on account of the combustible material in the mills, and the engines and water are of little avail. Before the flames had rested from their work of destruction, four flour mills and one cotton mill were leveled to the ground, and four hves lost, and many persons receiving serious injury. The aggregate loss will be nearly $500,000, one half of which is covered by insurance. Further particulars of this dreadful and costly calamity will be found in another column.

In the Republican cancus in Washington on Saturday night, General Henderson, of Illinois, offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

Residued, 'That the following-named honorably-discharged Union soldiers, munus a leg or an arm, or both, and now borne on the soldiers' roll of the House of Representatives of the United States, be retained by the doorkeeper of the House on said roll, subject, however, to dismissal for just and sufficient cause:

S. H. Decker, both arms off, Ohio.

John Ryan, one leg off Penpaylgania

John Ryan, one leg off, Pennsylvania. James T. McConnell, one leg off, In-

Hugh Lewis, one leg off, Wisconsin. John Rome, one arm off, New Jersey. Capt. J. W. White, one arm off, Ohio Three of these soldiers are Republicans, and three are Democrats. If they are good assistants about the capital, they should not be removed. The spirit which prompted the adoption of this resolution is worthy of the Republican party. It will do justice to the disabled soldiers of the late war, whether they are Republican or Democrats, but no room will be found for Confederates to whom the Democrats gave so much while they had control of Congress. One of the most remarkable instances of careful management of public business, is that of the sub-treasury at New York, during the cleven years Mr. Hillhouse has held the position of Assistant Treasurer in that city. Mr. Hillhouse has retired from that responsible office, and there is a shortage in his accounts of only $1,500. It must be borne in mind that there has passed through the hands of the employes of that office during these eleven years, over sixteen billion dollars; and when this bewidering amount is taken into account, with the smallness of the shortage, it is one of the most striking instances of houest and competent management of public funds ever known in the history of this or any other country. There has never been any banking, mercantile, or manufacturing business carried on in this country which has shown so much carefulness and thoroughness in its management. Those who like to how about national rascality. and the extravagance of government officials, should remember that during the past year $350,000,000 of revenue was collected without the loss of a dollar, and that in the handling of the baffling amount of sixteen billions, there is a #### shortage of only a few hundred dollars! KEIFER FOR SPEAKER.

Joseph Warren Keifer, of Ohio, has been selected as Speaker of the House of Representatives by the Republicans. This result was anticipated for two or three reasons. First of all, he is an Ohio man, and to come from that State means success. In the second place, he was one of the famous 306-a stalwart of the statwarts, and that gave him a prestige which neither Kasson, of Iowa, nor Hiscock, of New York, could command. On the sixteenth ballot, the result ended the contest, the vote being as follows:

| Keifer | 90 Burrows | 1 | Hiscock | 18 Octh | 8 | Kasson | 10 Dunnet | 8 | Reed | 11 | Necessary to a choice 76 to marshal his forces which were well combined. Had he lost any one of them he would have been defeated; but he held them together with excellent skil and thereby gain the office which is second in power in this country. There was a time when Frank Hiscock was the leading condidate. Before the assassination on rule, than men or boys, do not go on the 2d of July, he had the lead, but when General Arthur became President, New York lost its grip on the Speaker. ship the political plum fell to the lot of Ohio for the first time in its history. It is charged, and it may be true, but the probability is that the administration had of the administration as well as the Renublican members from the South. His canvass for the Speakership was most admirably managed on his part, and beside this he did nothing which was not perfeetly straightforward throughout the contest.

General Keifer is yet a young man, being only 45. Ho is a lawyer by profession, and lives at Springfield. He entered the war of the rebellion as Major of the Third Ohio infantry, and served four years and four months, was engaged in (more than a dozen battles and was four times wounded. For gallantly and distinguished services during the campaign ending to Congress to-morrow, and in manu- in the surrender of the insurgent army under General Lee, he was appointed which will gratify the public in general. Major General by brevet. He has served in Congress only four years, and was re-elected to a third terms year ago.

He is an able man and has those peculiar qualities which fit him for the Speakership. He is a man of great energy, of considerable skill and tact. Beside this, he is fair minded, and his personal influence, and thorough Republicanism, will bring to his support the entire Republican party in Congress.

GIVE THE GIRLS A CHANCE. There is a strike going on in Milwau kee among the eiger-makers, which has closed nearly all the eigar factories in the city. Since the strike, the manufacturers have given employment to girls, and one of the means used by the strikers to keep the shops closed is to prevent as far us possible, girls from working in sliops. They have taken a very bold course in the attempt to accomplish their purpose. The Milwaukee Republican in dealing with the question says: "It may be the death of at least four men. The fire questioned whether the eigar-makers broke out in the Pillsbury "B" flouring from the tobacco factories, are influenced by a regard for the moral and physical welfare of the girls. In the circular issued by the strikers, the corrupting influence of shop work on girls, and the unhealthy character of the employment are pointed out, and the threat is made that the names of the girls employed, with the address of their parents, will be published weekly. Now these girls are compelled to work for a living, and they can make better wages in these shops than in other employment, even supposing they could secure other employment. It is not to be believed that the cigar makers, who have so much regard for the moral welfare of the girls as the circular indicates, would exercise a corrupting influence beyond that of any other class of workmen."

It seems also that the strikers have en-deavered to make mothers believe that working in tobacco is especially injurious to health. Several years ago, Dr. William A. Hammond, theu surgeon general of the United States, in company with some prominent English and French physicians, paid a visit to many of the extensive tobacco factories in London and Paris, for the purpose of collecting statistics in regard to the health of the employes of these factories. It was found that tobacconists were, as a general rule, much healthier than the apparatives in other shape. In Lon. the operatives in other shops. In London the health of the employes in tobacco shops was exceedingly good, sickness rarely ever occuring, and the death rate being remarkably low considering the number of persons employed in the manufacture of cigars and smoking tobacco. In Paris they found the same condition of things in regard to the sanitary effect of tobacco dust; and in one factory especially, where fine-cut chewing and smoking tobaccos were madeone man had worked forty-one years and had not been sick three days in that time. A number of the employes had in the many years and the health of all was remarkably good. Dr. Beard, of Philadelphia, a gentleman who stands high practitioner, says that 8. both by general observation and by statistics, tobacconists are, if anything, healthier and longer lived, than the average of in-door operatives. In some of the rooms the workmen live in an atmosphere of tobacco dust, large quantities of which they must take into their lungs with each inspiration; and yet they become so entirely accustomed to it that they are not only as free from disease as the average operatives, but are really longer-lived. It is thought by some that working in tobacco protects the system from consumption and fevers, and some The girls should be allowed to have a chance to work for their living, and the men who strike have no right to make war upon them. The trades unions in New York and other cities are waging a contest against female labor, and are using the questions of the evil influences of tobacco shops and the unhealthfulness of tobacco Keifer was also fortunate in being able dust, as a means to prevent girls from engaging in that business. Many girls are compelled to earn their own living. They can not all get employment in stores. printing offices, millinery shops, and so on, and consequently many are forced to accept honest labor wherever it can be found. They do more steady work, as a sprees, seldom strike, give their employers no trouble, and therefore they are growing in demand as eiger-makers. That

MILL DISASTER.

Fire and Explasion with Loss of Life

at the Minneapolis Flour and Cot-Sr. Paul, Dec. 4.-At 4 o'clock this morning, a fire broke out in the milling district of Minneapolis, destroying, before it was subdued, four large flour mills and one cotton mill, and causing who urge mothers to withdraw their girls | mill, owned and operated by C. A. Pillsbury & Co. It communicated to the Excelsior mill, owned by D. Morrison, and operated by Crocker, Fisk & Co., which exploded, killing Neil Fredericks, first assistant engineer of the fire department-The fire then communicated to the Empire mill, owned by L. F. Watson, of Massachusetts, and operated by C. A. Pillsbury & Co. A street having been reached at this point, the fire was got under control, but the brands from the conflagration falling upon the roof of the cotton mill near by, owned by D. Morrison, it was also con-sumed. Thus four flouring mills and one cotton mill were consumed, with the railroad on the trestle work in the rear of the mills, and several freight cars filled with wheat. The fire had communicated to the mill of Crocker, Fisk and Co., and when the explosion occurred it levelled the walls of the structure, crushing the elevated railroad track in front of the mill and killing three persons, injuring another fatally, and several others in a less degree. It is possible that more than three fatalities have occurred, as the result of the explosion; but how many cannot now be definitely stated.

Among the number killed were assistant Chief Engineer Neil Fredericks, and a member of book and ladder company named Huey, who, with other firemen, occupied a place on the elevated railroad track immediately in front of the mill. Several other of the firemen simiflying missile, and one other person who was standing under the elevated railroad, was crushed to death by the walls and timbers of the railroad track. The explosion was of great violence, shattering windows as far as ten blocks away from windows as far as ten blocks away from the scene, and starting people from their early slumbers in all parts of the city. The cause is all a matter of speculation thus far. The mill had been shut down for some time, and the explosion is as likely to have been from confined gas as from flour dust, to which the Washburn mill explosion was attributed. The explosion, violent as it proved to be The explosion, violent as it proved to be did not topple the walls of the Empire Mill, but spent its force by blowing the root into the air and the front and rear walls out, the debris leveling in its pro-

RUN OVER.

MILWAUKEE, Dec. 3.- A sad and fatal ecident occurred at Eim Grove Station on the Chicago, Milwankeo & St. Paul railroad, nine miles out of this city, at 8 o'clock this morning, whereby Henry Gregg, aged 80 years, an old and honored resident of this place, was run over and killed. His head was crushed to a jelly. The train which killed him left this city a little after 7 o'clock. Gregg desired to board it, and as he was a little late ran to most the train on the track. He threw up his hands add endeavored to stop it. He did not appropend his danger until too late, and went under the wheels, to come forth a mangled corpse. His remains were taken in charge by friends. No blame is attached to the railway company, the accident being caused by Mr. Gregg's own foolish carclessness.

TIRED OF LIFE.

MILWAUKEE, December 4. - Max Luschman, lately arrived from the old country, either committed suicide or accidentally shot and killed himself some time during Friday night or Saturday. He had been missing from the home of his parents, 711 Broadway, since Friday. This morning his mother went into the cellar and was horrified at the discovery of her boy's dead body lying on the floor, and on making an examination found a pistol ball had entered his right tem-ple, which no doubt resulted in his

THE DEACON'S TURKEY.

Deacon Turner had been a "professor" for upwards of thirty years, and his walk and conversation had corresponded with his profession; but the store he set by that turkey, some of the stricter sort shook their heads and said, was altogether greater than it was meet for one of his calling to set by any carnal creature.

But there was a great excuse for the worthy man; for it must have been a very spiritually-minded person whose mouth would not have watered at the sight of such a fowl as the deacon was fatting for the coming Thanksgiving.

That turkey, it is our candid belief, stood full four feet barefooted; at what figure he turned the scale is not set wn in the records of corpulent statistics, and we prefer not to shock the reader's credulity by hazarding an opinion. Not old enough to be tough, but in the full perfection of completed adolescence, plump in contour without the grosser obesity of declining years, with a with a very collineacous grows.

gifted with every gallinaceous grace, he was, indeed, a biped to be proud of. Now, whilst juicy visions were flit-ting before the minds of expectant guests, and more than one mature maiden was longingly anticipating a tug at his wishbone, the deacon's turkey became a stumbling-block of temptation in the way of Sam Whipple and Dick Spangler—a pair of light-minded youths who could see a great deal of fun in a very poor joke.

"What capital sport it would be to steal that turkey on Thanksgiving eve," suggested Sam, with a wink at Dick.

"And get Tom Grill, the colored cook, to rosst him, and then call in a lot of the boys, and have a glorious lot of the boys, and have a glorious time," added the latter.

"Then, as we're both among the youngsters invited to the deacon's dinner, won't it be jolly to hear his lamentations over the missing fowl?—they'll beat out of sight all the sighs ever heaved for the flesh-pots of Egypt," chuckled Sam.

"He! he! he!" glggled Dick.

"Haw! haw! haw!" guffawed Sam.

"Let's do it," said the one.

"Agreed!" returned the other.

After laying their heads together half-an-hour, a plan was matured, and the two separated in great glee. The deacon's turkey roosted in the wood-house, which had a shutter opening on an adjacent alley, and fastened by a hook and staple inside. On a visit which Sam Whipple made to the prem-ises on Wednesday afternoon, under pretext of borrowing the deacon's saw-buck, he managed slyly to undo the hook, thus leaving the way clear for the the night's operations.

At a safe hour after dark the conspirators started on their errand, first casting lots to decide who should enwood-house and bring off the prize, and who should keep watch—the former task falling to Sam, and the latter to Dick.

neared the mouth of the alley.

Dick took his station, and Sam, advancing stealthily, soon reached the shutter, which he had no difficulty in shutter, which he had no difficulty in opening. Then climbing in, he was not long in finding the object of his scarch. "Put! put!" squawked the turkey, and flop, flop, went his wings, as Sam grasped his legs and pulled him down from his perch.

After a sharp scuffle, Sam was triumphant, and held his gobblership fast under one arm and securely gagged him with the other hand.

The noise of the structure had aroused

The noise of the struggle had aroused the deacon's dog, who growled and barked fiercely; but Sam kept quiet and soon all was still.

"Is that you, Dick?" he whispered, as he heard steps approaching softly outside.
"Yes," was the answer in the same

"Here, take him," said Sam, passing out the turkey, which the other re-

Then climbing out himself, which took a little time, for he moved cautiously, he looked about for Dick, but neither he nor the turkey was in sight. He walked up and down the alley, but the search was in vain.

"Well, I call that a shabby trick!" muttered Sam, "after my taking all the risk, too. But may be half turn up all right in the morning. He had better, I tell him?"

So saying, Sam walked sulkily home.
Next morning, bright and early, he started in search of Dick, whom he met shortly apparently on a similar hunt for

"Where's that turkey?" was Sam's first question.

"Where is he, yourself?" retorted Dick.
"I handed him out to you," returned

"You didn't," replied the other.
"When the dog barked, I dodged round the corner. When I came back, I went up to the wood-house, and called you as loudly as I dured;"but you had gone."

"That's too thin," sneered Sam. "What do you mean?"

"That you've turned traitor, and made away with the turkey."
"That's a lie!"

The deacon, so far from appearing chopfullen, looked unusually cheerful, and when the guests walked in to dinner, what was Sam's and Dick's as-tonishment to see at the post of honor on the table the finest, fattest and biggest turkey that ever aroused mortal heart to thanksgiving. "I tell you what, friends," said the deacon, when he had finished saying grace, "we have more to be thankful for than most of you are yet aware of. You don't know what a narrow escape You don't know what a narrow escape we've had from losing the best part of our dinner. Last night I heard the dog bark, and going down the alley back of the wood-house, found the shutter open. Somebody inside whispered: 'Is that you, Dick?' 'Yes, I answered,' for you know my name is lichard. 'Here, take him,' said the other, handing out the turkey, which I quietly took and bore away.'

The mystery between Sam and Dick was thus cleared up, but happily not.

was thus cleared up, but happily not, as we have seen, till they had sufficiently punished one another. From a twinkle in the deacon's eye they more than half suspected that he knew all. At any rate, neither Sam nor Dick ever ventured again to visit Edith Turner, the deacon's pretty daughter, who, six months after, married another, and, let us hope, a better man.—New York

A Night On the Brink of Niagara.

In rambling about this part of the country I was curious enough to hunt up the three men who were so nearly swept over the falls a week or so ago. I was particularly interested in Green-wood, for he was the one who spent a whole night in his open boat with nothing but a small anchor and a small rope between him and the falls. John Greenwood and the two Lehmans, father and son, started in two small boats to cross the river from Chippewa, which is only a short distance above the falls, to the American side, to visit some friends. Their visit was made. and just as darkness was setting in they launched their boats on the return voyage at a spot hardly a mile above the falls, and only a half mile from where the terrible suction of the rapids begins. One of those damp, thick fogs, due chiefly, I think, to the spray of the cataract being driven up stream by a strong wind, suddenly enveloped the two boats, and the occupants, appalled at the sudden predicament in which they found themselves, lost their reckoning, and knew not which way to steer for the nearest shore. Their cries for help brought out the town, and as their boats were gradually drifting within reach of the roar of the cataract and out of reach of the human voice, the town-bell was rung in order to attract the attention of the men and direct them which way to steer. There was the most intense excitement, and people lined the river banks, peering into the impenetrable fog in the hope of catching a glimpse of the imperiled men. From the cries which came out of the darkness, it was evident that the boats were nearing the falls, and were coming within the influence of the rapids —the long arms of the devil-fish, as it were, which drag the victim to his death. Their occupants rowed for life, and, at the last moment, a friendly eddy caught the Lehmans' craft and brought it within easy reach of the shore, which the two men lost no time of his own experience Greenwood said: "I pulled with all my strength toward the shore when I heard the bell, and so did the Lehmans. I was further out in the river than they, and seemed to eatch more of the current, and this soon seemed to drag mount of all sound of my companions. All I could hear was the horrible roar of the falls and an occasional peal of the bell. I was driven half mad, and once I thought of leaping overboard and swimming straight for that horribly fascinating roar. I must have been completely out of my mind for about a minute. My reason had returned as suddenly as it had left me, and I caught myself with one hand on the gunwale in the very act of proparing to go overboard. Then I began to have a glimmering of hone as another r the wood-house and bring off the rize, and who should keep watch—have a glimmering of hope as another and louder peal of the town bell struck ter to Dick.

"You stand here," said Sam, as they falls were (half a mile at the farthest). remembered how close I came to going overboard, the perspiration stood out on my face and neck as big as pearls. I was pulling lustily for the bell when one oar snapped and its blade became useless. I could feel the waters straining at the bottom of the boat, as if they took a fiendish delight in urging us towards the falls. Suddenly I us towards the falls. Suddenly I thought of the little anchor in the bow, and crawling forward I pulled it out, carefully examined the knot with which it was fastened to the rope, and then the knot which bound the rope to the boat. The rope was little larger than a clothes-line, and the anchor was a poor offer but they were my only hope. If clothes-line, and the anchor was a poor affair, but they were my only hope. If the piece of iron only caught in some of the rocks as we drifted towards the falls, the rope might hold the beat in one position until daylight and help should arrive. The anchor flukes bit, first one piece of rock, then another, without taking firm hold, and I began to think again of the terrible roar which was now becoming more and more diswas now becoming more and more dis-tinct, when all of a sudden the rope stretched out with a snap that brought up the boat with a shock, and we were fast anchored in the rapids. Would the rope hold? "I can tell you that I prayed that it would. I got away forward and kept carefully examining it as far out as I could reach, for I thought of one strand parting and then another, and the plunge over the falls into eternity. I shrank back every time that my anxiety urged me to even the top and shrank back every time that my anxiety urged me to examine the rope, and each time my fingers began their work my heart was like lead, for surely, I said, they will find another broken strand this time. Then, as inch by inch they went over the rope, traveling beyond the gunwale an arm's length, and finding nothing, my heart began to lighten. And when, with my arm at retched to its farthest, my finger-tips assured me that the rope was whole, I shouted with joy. The rope might shouted with joy. The rope might have been parting under water all that time for aught I knew, but I knew nothing of that portion of it, and cared nothing. It was only that part that I could feel, perhaps two foet and a half altogether, that I was concorned about. If it broke it must break somewhere in that small stretch, and I quivered like a leaf whenever I examined it. And so the long night were away. I praying "That's a lie!"

For the space of three minutes there was a rapid and promiscuous motion of four fists, at the end of which time Sam hauled off with a blackened eye, and Dick with a bloody nose. Both seemed to have had enough for the present, and went their respective ways.

When, at the appointed hour, they severally entered the deacon's parlor—each fearing that if he stayed away he would be liable to suspicion—Sam had concealed his damaged optic with a pair of goggles, worn, he said, for sore eyes brought on by excessive study, and Dick accounted for his swollen hose on the ground of a violent catarrh.

The Southern Soldier.

In the winter of 1863 the First regiment of Virginia Artillery was in winter quarters at Frederick Hall, Va. The Second company of Richmond Howitz-Second company of Richmond Hewitzers was camping on the grounds of Dr. Pondleton. Here an incident occurred which illustrates how little regard the volunteer had for army regulations. Liout. C., of the Salom Artillery, was a graduate of the Virginia Military Institute at Lexington. He made himself quite obnoxious to the boys by his strict military discipline, whether in the field or camp, or in the winter quarters. It was his great delight to be officer of It was his great delight to be officer of the day, on which occasion he would do all he could to impress the men with the idea that he was au fait in army regulations.

One night he rode up to the place where the Second Howitzers were parked and yelled out in a very loud voice,

"Where is the sentinel on this post?" "Where is the sentined on this post?"
The sentinel was sitting on a ruptured bag of corn, engaged in parching a quantity of the grain, more for the purpose of passing the time away (of course) than with any intention of satiating his appetite (for all good soldiers will remember that an appetite was an implement not marked down in the catalogue of a Confederate soldier's accounterments), and he replied:

ments), and he replied;
"It ain't a post; it's a sack of corn."

"It ain't a post; it's a sack of corn."
"Where's your corporal?"
"Sleep, I reckon."
"Why don't you walk your post?"
"Didn't I tell you 'twa'nt a post?"
"Who's corporal of this guard?"
"Billy McCarthy, Second Howitzers; sleeps in second cabin at head of line on left side," replied the sentry, all during the conversation keeping his eye on his the conversation keeping his eye on his frying-pan, which he continued to shake to keep his corn from burning.

"Young man," said Lieut. C., "you don't seem to know the first duty of a soldier. How long have you been in the army?"

Three years, one month, ten days and eighteen hours, when the relief comes round. I always keep it to the notch."

round. I always keep it to the notch," replied the sentry, singing a few snatches from the popular song of those days:
"When the crue! war is over—"
"Why did you not rise, salute me and walk your beat when I came up? I shall report you to headquarters in the morning for neglect of duty."
Having which the Lieutenant departed and soon disappeared in the darkness.

and soon disappeared in the darkness.

After giving him sufficient time to get off some distance, the sentinel mounted the pile of corn and yelled out:

"Hello there, mister!"
"What'll you have?" was th was the reply.

"Who are you, anyhow?" The Lieutenant answered: "I am Lieut. C., officer of the day."

"Oh! shucks," replied the sentry;

"blame my hide if I didn't think you was Gen. Lee.'

Educating Oysters.

And, although it has been doubted that an oyster had been so far subjugated as to "follow its master up and down stairs," a consummation which might be accepted as positive progressive steps in the rise toward ultimate civilization at large civilization ilization, at least according to "Lewes Seaside Studies," oysters are susceptible of being educated to a small extent. In the great establishments on the country of the great establishments on the country of the great establishments of the country of the great establishments of the country of the great establishments. of Calvados, the merchants teach oysters to keep their shells closed when out of the water, by which the liquor re-tained keeps their gills moist, and they arrive lively in far-distant Paris. The process may be worthy extensive publicity; it is this: No sooner is an cyster taken from the sea than it closes its shells, and opens them after a certain time—from fatigue, it is said, but more time—trom fatigue, it is said, but more probably because the shock it received by removal into the air, causing its muscles to contract, has passed away. The Calvados men take advantage of this to exercise the oysters, and make them accustomed to be out of the water, by leaving them deliv in the atreacher. leaving them daily in the atmosphere for longer and longer periods. This has the desired effect; the well-educated mollusk keeps its door closed at least for many consecutive hours, and so long as the shell is closed its gills are kept moist, —All the Year Round.

Love's Test.

The Cashier enters the private office of the President, nervous and agitated. "Sir," he says, "I have something on my mind which I feel myself compelled to disclose to you, though for months I have striven to concast it." The President have striven to conceal it." The President turns pale. "The fact is, that I—love your daughter." The President breathes more freely. "Ah, you love breathes more freely. "An, you love my daughter. Do you ever make any errors in your books, or in counting your cash? Find yourself abstracted, ch?" "Never, sir!" with pride, "Then, sir, I must decline to encourage your suit. #### Girl Life in India.

On the day of her marriage she is put into a palanquin, shut up tight, and carried to L. chusband's house. Hitherto she has been the tpoiled pet of her mother; now she is to be the little slave of her mother-in-law, upon whom she is to wait, whose commands she is implicitly to obey, and who teaches her what she is to do to please her husband; what dishes he likes best and how to cook them. If the mother-in-law is kind she will let the girl go home occasionally to visit her mother. Of her husbandshe sees little or nothon her husbandshe sees little or nothing. She is of no more account to him than a little cat or dog would be. There is seldem or never any love between them, and, no matter how cruelly she may be treated, she can never complain to her husband of anything his mother may do for his mother. may do, for his would never take his wife's part. Her husband sends to her daily the portion of food that is to be cooked for her, himself and the children. When it is prepared the places it all on one large property. it all on one large brass platter, and it is sent to her husband's room. He cats what he wishes, and then the plat-ter is sent back, with what is left, for her and the children. They sit together on the ground and cat the remainder, having neither knives, forks nor spoons While she is young she is never allowed to go anywhere.

The little girls are married even as young as 8 years of age, and, should the boy to whom such a child is married by to whom such a child is married as a solid a ried die the next day, she is called a widow, and is from henceforth doomed to perpetual widowhood; she can never marry again. As a widow she must never wear any jewelry, never dress her hair, never sleep on a bed, nothing but a piece of matting spread on the hard brick floor, and sometimes, in fact, not even that between her and the cold bricks, and, no matter how cold the night may be, she must have no other covering than the thin garment she has worn in the day.

She must eat but one meal of food a she must eat but one meal of food a day, and that of the coarsest kind, and once in two weeks she must fast for twenty-four hours. Then not a bit of food, not a drop of water or medicine must pass her lips, not even if she were dying. She must never sit down or speak in the presence of her method in dying. She must never sit down or speak in the presence of her mother-in-law, unless they command her to do so. Her food must be cooked and eaten apart. from the other women's. She is a dis-graced, a degraded woman. She may never even look on at any of the mar-riage ceremonies or festivals. It would be an evil onen for her to do so. She may have been a high caste Brahminic woman; but, on her becoming a widow, any, even the lowest servant, may order her to do what they do not like to do No woman in the house must ever speak one word of love or pity to her, for it is supposed that if a woman shows the slightest commiscration to a widow she will immediately become one herself.

I saw an account a short time ago in as an account a snort time ago in an English paper that they had been trying to take the consus of the population lately in India, and, as far as they had gone, they found that there were "80,000 widows under 6 years of ago!" Can you imagine the amount of suffer. Can you imagine the amount of suffering that little sentence tells of and fore-tells?—Congregationalist.

Too Much Remorse.

There has been a feud of long standing between two Galveston darkies. They were continually fighting and quarreling. Not long since one of them died. reing. Not long since one of them died, and, to the astonishment of the colored population, the other one attended the funeral. After the funeral services were ever, the Rev. Aminidab Bledso, of the Blue Light Colored Tabernacio, met the surviving enemy, and said, impressively:
"I was much pleased to see yer at de obsequies ob yore ole enemy. Hit does credit to de goodness ob yore heart. Hit shows dad yer don't carry yore presentiments beyond de grave. Eberybody is praisin' yer for yore goodness."

"I dunno about dut ar. I had to lose half a day's work attendin' dat ar funeral, and do Bible says, 'Bizness fust and placeure of the says, 'Bizness fust and pleasure afterward, and I tuck do pleasure fust and did my work afterward. I recken I ought to be ashamed of myseft."—Galveston News.

Bright's Disease and Ice Water. The idea has been advanced that Bright's disease is attributable to the immoderate use of ice water and cold drinks, the fact being cited that the people of this country use 90 per cent, more ice in drinks than the people of any other country—the inhabitants of Greenland not excepted-and that we have 75 per cent, more of Bright's discase. The wine-drinking countries of Europe are said to be comparatively free from the malady, while in America the progress of the disease, it is asserted. has kept pace with the increased consumption of ice.

Employment for a Youthful Lover. One of our marriageable young ladies from the suburbs had heard her father say that he wanted a boy to do chores and as she was leaving the church for home, a forward youth of about 15, with cane in hand and a cigarette in his mouth, thinking himself every inch a man, stepped up to the young lady and with an air of assurance proffered his services as escort, at the same time offering his arm.

"Well, yes," said the young lady, "I believe father has been thinking of tak-ing a boy to bring up, and perhaps you might answer."

The boy sloped at a go-as-you-please.

Determined to Have a Peep.

A lady of rather a positive turn of mind once gave a tea-party to some lady friends in her bedroom. "John," she said to her husband, as she heard the John tried to resist, but finally stocambed. Every now and then he would make an effort to peep out as the ladi-laughed and made merry, but he we mercilessly driven back by his mager. wife. At length, after a good joke had exploded among the party. John had his head away out. "Get in there, will you?" whispered his wife as she mulged him. "No!" shrieked John; "as leng as I have the spirit of a man left in me, I will take a peep!"

REV. Dr. DABNEY, a Southern officer in the late war, when preaching de-nounced the soldiers' habit of dodging at bullets and cannon-balls, and advanced the doctrine that each ball was directed by Providence, and was speci where it was destined to go. Next day, when the battle waged afresh, a young when the Dattie waged arresu, a young aide, riding up for orders, found Col. Dabney writing with his back against a heavy gate-post. The aide, as he rode off, touched his hat and remarked, "I see, Colonel, you have got a gate-post between you and Providence."

play is a fine one. -Those who planned to attend the Uncle Tom matince, Saturday, especially fhe little folk, were disappointed. The management concluded the audience was too small, and declared off the entertainment for the afternoon. -The trial of Fred Blank for the murin the circuit court. Attorney Sale appears for the presecution, and. Attorneys Wm. Smith and Winans and Fethers for the defense.

-Smith's Uncle Tom's Cabin company are now billed for the 12th at the Opera house. There are two Topsys, two trained donkeys, two packs of bloodhounds, in fact a double show for a single price. Sam Lucas is with this troups. He is a host in himself.

-The Methodist conference of the Janesville district will most to morrow, and will be followed by the Sunday school congress, under charge of Rev. Dr. Vincent, and Rov. Dr. Gillett, which opens Wednesday and concludes Thursday noon.

-Extra preparations are being made for making the annual ball of Water Witch Engine company, next Thursday evening, at Apollo hall, the most enjoyable of all those given by the company during the past quarter of a century.

-In the case of J. Maurice Smith vs. The City of Janesville, in which the Supreme Court has decided against the city, the plaintiff's attorneys, Smith & Em-Have the largest and best assortment of all mons, have filed as their bill, to be taxed up in the costs, the sum of $212.28.

-There was a narrow escape from a sensational fire yesterday morning. An ry's house on River street in the First ward, where one or two are just recoverfire was suppressed before it become necessary to call in any help from outside.

-Saturday night burglars entered the house of Mrs. S. C. Buraham, on Bluff street, and got away with $8 and a pie. It appears that after securing the money their hunger urged them to look in the cupboard, but they had such dainty appotites that pie seemed to be the only thing to satisfy them, and they quickly gobbled it.

-To-morrow evening at the Congregational church Rev. Frank P. Woodbury gives his fourth lecture in the course, the subject being "Picturesque Palestine." The lecture will be illustrated by forty colored views of various points of interest. Also a large picture of Jerusalem, and a bird's eye view of Palestine.

-As will be seen by W. M. Eldredge's announcement in another column. those chamois-skin vests are selling like hot cakes. They are much better than hot | For Toilet and Holiday goods call on cakes to keep a body warm, and Jack Frost gives up the attack when he mee's anybody clad in one of those. Some very nice Christmas goods are also being eceived at the Empire drug store, and they will bear the inspection to which the proprietor invites the public generally and everybody in particular.

-A woman and three of her children in the town of Plymouth were taken very ill Saturday night, the indications being those of arsenic poisoning. Medical help was summoned and antidotes successfully given. The only seeming cause was the eating of cabbage, which had grown in a potato field, where Paris green had been used to kill potato bugs, and some of this poison had probably got scattered accidentally on the cabbage. -To-morrow evening John A. Stevens is to appear at the Opera house in "Passion's Slave," a highly romantic play, of which he is the author, and in which he takes the leading part. Mr. Stevens in the east draws crowded houses, and has enthusiastic audiences wherever he appears, but is not so well known here, and many will probably neglect to hear him, only to regret the neglect deeply, when they hear the opinions of those who do attend. The Boston Post gives high praise to the "originality and merit" of the play, and says that "Stevens plays the part of Manuel DeFee with all that fire and spirit which ever characterizes his acting. He is strong in his emotional lines, and in those scenes calling for the expression of repressed feelings." The Boston Herald leavs: "It is a highly romantic play and was acted in an excellent manner by its anthor, John A. Stevens, and his support." More extended and numerous press notices might be given if space allowed. They are all to the offect that the play and the company merit full houses and appreciative audiences.

Feeble Ladies.

Those lauguid, thresome sensations, causing you to feel scarcely able to be on your feet; that constant drain that is taking from your system all its elasticity, driving the bloom from your cheeks; that continual strain upon your vital forces, rendering you irritable and frotful; can easily be removed by the use of that maryelous remedy, Hop Bitters. Irregularities and obstructions of your system are relieved at once, while the special cause of periodical pain is permanently removed. Will you heed this?

One Experience from Many.

"I had been sick and miserable so long, and had caused my husband so much trouble and expense, no one seemed to know what ailed me, that I was completely disheartened and discouraged. In this frame of mind I got a bottle of Hop Bitters and used them unknown to my Bitters and used them unknown to my family. I soon began to improve and gained so fast that my husband and family thought it strange and unnatural, but when I told them what had helped me they said 'Hurral for Hop Bitters! long may they prosper, for they have made mother well and us happy."—The mothers.

COMPLETE MANHOUD.

Roy, William L. Bray, pastor of the Congregational church at Clinton, Iowa, supplied the pulpit of the Congregational church here yesterday, preaching excelient sermons both morning and evening. In the evening he chose as his text 'And ye are complete in him," being some words written by Paul to the Colossins He opened the discourse by parrating as interview had by him with the builder of a complete saw-mill in Clinton. The builder was a liberal religion, but he called hum an orthodox in practice. He did not let the workmen bave any liberty. He made them how to his line, to adjust every bearing, and place every board a wording to his plan. This requirement for every workman to go by the builder's plan was necessary to make a complete mill. Thus it was with Paul. He laid down a rule, a plan by which man should be completed. Anything was complete when it answered exactly the purposes for which it was introduced, and so with man. Some thought that education or culture was sufficient to make manhood complete. The speaker quoted Dr. Holland's criticism on the theory. Culture was the development of self, and never rid itself of self. The true development of a man in all his parts necessitated the surrender of self to all that was pure and true.

Some men's characters were spoken of as blasted. The soil was all right, the seed was good, but by some circumstances the fruit was blighted, just as it was about to ripen completely. Afflictions and trials often came, and it remained with the man himself whether he went down under these or become strengthened or purified. Manhood was made "complete in him."

By following Christ's teachings and being inspired by his spirit man came into harmony with the purposes of his creation, and by following Christ's life as an example, he could not but gain success. Men had lectured on "The Mistakes of Moses," but not one ever spoke of the mistakes or failures of Christ. He was acknowledged by all to be perfect. Hence, by patterning after such a life, man must reach to completion. In Christ was everthing needful for man's full development, and "in time ye are complete."

Mr. Bray has a pleasant manner, and presents his thoughts clearly and with much earnostness, and he was listened to yesterday with much interest by fair sized congregations at both services.
